Planning

Planning shapes the places in which we live, work and play. It supports our communities to set the path of our collective future.

GHD strives to achieve a sustainable balance between the environment, community and the demands of the built environment.

Our planning projects are products of a multidisciplinary skillset and a collaborative approach to problem-solving. We understand the significance of incorporating issues that are important to a range of stakeholders, as well as finding integrated solutions.

Collaboration across our full range of disciplines adds value to our clients' prosperity.

Many of our team members have local and government experience, allowing us to understand and negotiate the practical and political aspects of planning. Our approach to land use, development and environmental management often includes the facilitation of community and stakeholder workshops. This method ensures that all available opportunities are examined through cooperative engagement with key stakeholders.

Whether providing creative input at the beginning of a project or providing detailed documentation towards final construction, GHD has extensive experience in all scales of urban and regional planning, land use and development projects, and environmental management. We work together with clients to create lasting community benefit.
